

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF NEVADA

JONATHAN COHAN,
Plaintiff,
vs.
PROVIDENT LIFE AND ACCIDENT
INSURANCE COMPANY, et al.,
Defendants. } } } } } Case No. 2:13-cv-00975-LDG-CWH
ORDER

This matter is before the Court on Plaintiff's Motion for Leave to File Exhibits Under Seal (#34), filed on November 27, 2013, Defendants Motion for Leave to File Documents Under Seal (#41), filed on December 18, 2013, and Plaintiff's Motion for Leave to File Reply Brief and Exhibit Under Seal (#46), filed on December 26, 2013. No responses were received for any of the three motions.

DISCUSSION

I. Sealing Standard

Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c) permits the court in which an action is pending to “make any order which justice requires to protect the party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression or undue burden or expense” upon motion by a party or a person from whom discovery is sought. The burden of persuasion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c) is on the party seeking the protective order. Cipollone v. Liggett Group, Inc., 785 F.2d 1108, 1121 (3d Cir. 1986). To meet that burden of persuasion, the party seeking the protective order must show good cause by demonstrating a particular need for the protection sought. Beckman Indus., Inc., v. Int’l. Ins. Co., 966 F.2d 470, 476 (9th Cir. 1992). Rule 26(c) requires more than “broad allegations of harm, unsubstantiated by specific examples or articulated reasoning.” Id., citing Cipollone v. Liggett. “A party asserting good cause bears the burden, for each particular document it seeks to protect, of showing that

1 prejudice or harm will result if no protective order is granted.” Foltz v. State Farm, 331 F.3d 1122,
 2 1130 (9th Cir. 2003), citing San Jose Mercury News, Inc., v. District Court, 187 F.3d 1096, 1102
 3 (9th Cir. 1999).

4 In Seattle Times Co. v. Rhinehart, the Supreme Court interpreted the language of Fed. R.
 5 Civ. P. 26(c) conferring “broad discretion on the trial court to decide when a protective order is 6 appropriate and what degree of protection is required.” 467 U.S. 20, 36 (1984). The Supreme Court 7 acknowledged that the “trial court is in the best position to weigh fairly the competing needs and 8 interests of the parties affected by discovery. The unique character of the discovery process requires 9 that the trial court have substantial latitude to fashion protective orders.” Id. Although the trial
 10 court has broad discretion in fashioning protective orders, the Supreme Court has also recognized “a 11 general right to inspect and copy public records and documents, including judicial records and 12 documents.” Nixon v. Warner Communications, 435 U.S. 589, 597 (1978). However, the common 13 law right to inspect and copy judicial records is not absolute. Id. Thus, the Supreme Court 14 concluded, “[e]very court has supervisory power of its own records and files, and access has been 15 denied where the court files might have become a vehicle for improper purposes.” Id.

16 A. The Presumption of Public Access

17 Unless court records are of the type “traditionally kept secret” the Ninth Circuit recognizes a 18 “strong presumption in favor of access.” Foltz v. State Farm Mutual Auto Insurance Company, 331
 19 F.3d 1122, 1135 (citing Hagestad v. Tragesser, 49 F.3d 1430, 1434 (9th Cir. 1995)). Grand jury 20 transcripts and warrant materials involved in pre-indictment investigations are two categories of 21 documents and records which have “traditionally been kept secret for important policy reasons.”
 22 Times Mirror Co. v. United States, 873 F.2d 1210, 1219 (9th Cir. 1989). Although the federal 23 common law right of access exists, it “does not mandate disclosure in all cases.” San Jose Mercury
 24 News, Inc., 187 F.3d at 1102. The strong presumption in favor of public access recognized by the 25 Ninth Circuit “can be overcome by sufficiently important countervailing interests.” Id.

26 1. Pretrial Discovery

27 In the Ninth Circuit, “[i]t is well-established that the fruits of pretrial discovery are, in the 28 absence of a court order to the contrary, presumptively public.” San Jose Mercury News v. United

1 States District Court, 187 F.3d 1096, 1103 (9th Cir. 1999). Thus, the Ninth Circuit concluded, 2 “[g]enerally, the public can gain access to litigation documents and information produced during 3 discovery unless the party opposing disclosure shows ‘good cause’ why a protective order is 4 necessary.” Phillips v. General Motors, 307 F.3d 1206, 1210 (9th Cir. 2002). “For good cause to 5 exist, the party seeking protection bears the burden of showing specific prejudice or harm will result 6 if no protective order is granted.” Id. at 1210-11. Or, as the Ninth Circuit articulated the standard in 7 Foltz, “[t]he burden is on the party requesting a protective order to demonstrate that (1) the material
 8 in question is a trade secret or other confidential information within the scope of Rule 26(c) and (2)
 9 disclosure would cause an identifiable, significant harm.” Foltz at 1131, quoting Deford v. Schmid 10 Prods. Co., 120 F.R.D. 648, 653 (D. Md. 1987). “If a court finds particularized harm will result 11 from disclosure of information to the public, then it balances the public and private interests to 12 decide whether a protective order is necessary.” Id. at 1211 (citing *Glenmede Trust Co. v.
 13 Thompson*, 56 F.3d 476, 483 (3d Cir. 1995)).

14 2. Sealed Discovery Documents

15 In Phillips, the Ninth Circuit carved out an exception to the presumption of public access, 16 holding that the presumption does not apply to materials filed with the court under seal subject to a
 17 valid protective order. 307 F.3d at 1213. The Phillips decision relied on the Seattle Times decision 18 in concluding that protective orders restricting disclosure of discovery materials which are not 19 admitted in evidence do not violate the public right of access to traditionally public sources of 20 information. Id. at 1213 (quoting, Seattle Times, 467 U.S. at 33. The Ninth Circuit reasoned that 21 the presumption of public access was rebutted because a district court had already determined that 22 good cause existed to protect the information from public disclosure by balancing the need for 23 discovery against the need for confidentiality in issuing the protective order. Id. Therefore, “when a 24 party attaches a sealed discovery document to a non-dispositive motion, the usual presumption of 25 the public’s right of access is rebutted.”

26 3. Materials Attached to Dispositive Motions

27 The Ninth Circuit comprehensively examined the presumption of public access to judicial 28 files and records in Kamakana v. City and County of Honolulu, 447 F.3d 1172 (9th Cir. 2006).

1 There, the court recognized that different interests are at stake in preserving the secrecy of materials
 2 produced during discovery and materials attached to dispositive motions. Citing Phillips and Foltz, 3 the Kamakana decision reiterated that a protective order issued under the Rule 26(c) may be issued 4 once a particularized showing of good cause exists for preserving the secrecy of discovery materials.
 5 “Rule 26(c) gives the district court much flexibility in balancing and protecting the interests of 6 private parties.” 447 F.3d at 1180.

7 The Kamakana court, therefore, held that a “good cause” showing is sufficient to seal
 8 documents produced in discovery. Id. However, the Kamakana decision also held that a showing 9 of “compelling reasons” is needed to support the secrecy of documents attached to dispositive
 10 motions. A showing of “good cause” does not, without more, satisfy the “compelling reasons” test
 11 required to maintain the secrecy of documents attached to dispositive motions. Id. The court found 12 that:

13 Different interests are at stake with the right of access than with 14 Rule 26(c); with the former, the private interests of the litigants are 15 not the only weights on the scale. Unlike private materials unearthed 16 during discovery, judicial records are public documents almost by 17 definition, and the public is entitled to access by default. (Citation 18 omitted). This fact sharply tips the balance in favor of production when a document formally sealed for good cause under Rule 26(c) becomes part of the judicial record. Thus, a “good cause” showing alone will not suffice to fulfill the “compelling reasons” standard that a party must meet to rebut the presumption of access to dispositive pleadings and attachments.

19 Id. Kamakana recognized that “compelling reasons” sufficient to outweigh the public’s interests in 20 disclosure and justify sealing records exist when court records may be used to gratify private spite, 21 permit public scandal, circulate libelous statements, or release trade secrets. Id. at 1179 (internal 22 quotations omitted). However, “[t]he mere fact that the production of records may lead to a 23 litigant’s embarrassment, incrimination, or exposure to further litigation will not, without more, 24 compel the court to seal its records.” Id., citing, Foltz, 331 F.3d at 1136. To justify sealing 25 documents attached to dispositive motions, a party is required to present articulable facts identifying 26 the interests favoring continuing secrecy and show that these specific interests overcome the 27 presumption of public access by outweighing the public’s interests in understanding the judicial 28 process. Id. at 1181 (internal citations and quotations omitted).

1 II. Motions to Seal

2 In all three motions, Plaintiff and Defendants request that specific exhibits be sealed because 3 they are “internal documents produced in discovery in accordance with a confidentiality 4 designation.” Pla’s Mot. #34, 2; Defs’ Mot. #41, 2; Pla’s Mot. #46, 2. It appears as though the 5 parties may be conducting discovery under an informal protective order agreement. However, no 6 stipulated protective order has been submitted and approved by the Court. Therefore, the Court will 7 order the parties to submit a stipulated protective order for its review to govern the exchange of 8 discovery in this action.

9 Additionally, the parties failed to articulate s particularized good cause reason that would 10 justify sealing the documents at issue. No explanation is provided regarding how the documents are 11 confidential to support the request to seal. Additionally, the parties failed to cite any authority as 12 required by Local Rule 7-2. Consequently, the Court is unable to undertake an individualized 13 review of each of the documents that the parties request be sealed in accordance with the standard 14 articulated above. The Court finds that the parties have failed to carry their burden under 15 Kamakana’s good cause standard and the Court will deny their requests to seal without prejudice.

16 Based on the foregoing and good cause appearing therefore,

17 IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Plaintiff’s Motion for Leave to File Exhibits Under Seal 18 (#34) is denied without prejudice.

19 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendants Motion for Leave to File Documents Under 20 Seal (#41) is denied without prejudice.

21 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Plaintiff’s Motion for Leave to File Reply Brief and 22 Exhibit Under Seal (#46) is denied without prejudice.

23 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the parties shall submit a Stipulated Protective Order by 24 close of business on January 30, 2014.

25 DATED this 21st day of January, 2014.
